

Fabius Fabullus's Letters Home

During the game Fabius Fabullus, the Legate of Legio V, did his duty as a faithful son of Rome and wrote to his parents regularly enclosing money for them. After the sack of Rome a few of his letters were found on the floor of the ruined Senate house. The fate of his parents is unknown.

LETTER I

Dearest Mater

Honoured Pater I am well and we are being paid, but not, according to what I am being told, by Rome. The local governors are reported to be paying for the legions out of their own pockets. This means that the legions are loyal, but not necessarily to Rome, or the Senate.

your ever loving son

Fabius Fabullus
Legate
Legio V Alaudae

LETTER II

Dearest Mater

Honoured Pater

I have heard there is much turmoil in Rome & write in the hope of news of yourselves. If, the gods forbend, Rome is truly in danger from the plebian mob, perhaps you should seek safety here in Germania Inferior. For myself, we have defeated the Germani, & the border zone is now quiet.

I enclose money for you to use to protect yourself, flee Rome, or whatever else you feel is appropriate.

your ever loving son

LETTER III

Dearest Mater

Honoured Pater

Are you well? Are you safe?

Answer please,

your ever loving son

Fabius Fabullus
Legate
Legio V Alaudae
